Trickcyclists' Tip Sheet

- Assessing personality can be difficult, but people generally take two approaches: Firstly, get an idea about work, relationships, hobbies, drugs, coping with stress, etc. or secondly, to focus much more on taking a history of personality disorder. The information below takes the latter approach.

Quick Personality Assessment Schedule (PAS-Q)
The following are the questions asked as part of the quick form of the Personality Assessment Schedule (PAS). Scoring details are not provided – you should look up scoring if you intend to use the scale clinically. The questions are provided so that candidates can ask focused and relevant questions about aspects of personality which might be pointing to the presence of personality disorder.

The full PAS includes screening questions, and additional questions which are asked if the initial questions are positive. Only the screening questions are given, which assumes that you will only want to highlight personality traits which might be causing problems to the individual.

Introductory Questions
- I should like to find out what sort of person you were before your present problems began. Could you tell me in a few words how you would describe yourself in this respect?
